Create more than just another music visualizer - play with the music. Create new sounds and sequences, change the speed of each planet, modify the harmonic ratios of each to your liking. Plus more to come - free updates for more features. This game is based on some code originally written by Oleg Vadnyuk for a real orrery (more details on his website here:) This new implementation has been completely re-written in C++ to be an audio workstation, but also features some of the functionality originally written for the orrery game. Sounds provided with this title are compatible with most known plugins and operating systems, including Windows 7. This includes support for the most up-to-date OGG/OGG2/FLAC and MP3 audio formats. The music system works, but can be slow on older PC's - currently 1024 samples/sec is used. However, it doesn't need the computer to run for a long time for a "song". The hard drive space requirements vary depending on the speed and quality settings you use. There is no music licence requirement. This game has been designed from scratch and all music created by Aurrery is released under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial 4.0 International License (CC-BY-NC).

Remember to consider the quality and sample rate of the music. If the speed is fast and the sample rate low, the audio file will compress and the music will sound muffled. The PC version has a built in PCM-L3 codec at 96 kbits/sec, whilst the Mac version is limited to 44.1 kbits/sec. This is because the PC has a faster CPU (90 MHz vs. 25 MHz) so allows for a faster 96 kbits/sec audio stream. You have the choice of using the built in WAV or OGG-FLAC files. By default, the music is played via the OGG-FLAC file. CURRENT KNOWN ISSUES: 1. PC and Mac version - the PC version uses a VST plug-in whereas the Mac version uses an AU plug-in. The Mac version also includes support for 4 track DX audio in waveform mode (with slight limitations compared to the PC version due to limitations of

What's new:

My favourite place in the UK is Devon and, when I say Devon, I'm not just referring to the county, I'm also talking about the town of Torquay, in the north of the county. Despite occupying a large part of the county, this picturesque town is tucked away and is just a short journey from Plymouth. The walks around the town are particularly attractive. Beachy paths start from behind the Old Town Hall at the south end of the road which separates the town from the beaches. The town gets its name from the River Dart which still flows through the town. Paths lead around the Old Town playing fields on the River Dart estuary or around the headlands, with views to the sea and Dartmoor in the distance. Two of my favourite walks are The Estuary Walk, which can be a short stroll if you avoid the car park, through fields and along the old railway track which runs along the estuary on a bridge just south of the town. This is certainly one of the prettiest walks I've been on. The other favourite walk is The Sea Views and is slightly longer. There are several viewpoints from which to admire the views to the coastal town between Torquay and beyond. There are lots of places to stay, some of the most popular being the Lymington and District Hotel and the Deuce Hotel (see below). The Torre Hotel situated in the Torquay centre is another option. One restaurant worth a mention is the Little Bridge House overlooking the estuary and on to the sea. The Little Bridge House menu celebrates the house specialties with British food including a variety of seafood dishes, scampi with chips, scallops, grilled chops, chicken and confit duck casserole with parsnip mash, veggies and gravy. The Ivy Cafe is also recommended. It has an Italian menu with a few British options including fish and chips, chicken chasseur, scampi and penne Alfredo. Grafton Glen is a private members' club at the end of Mill Lane on the South Foreland. The club has an excellent restaurant and bar and is open to non-members for lunch at £12.50. Other options include sandwiches and baguettes, full English and steaks, from £15.50. Lunch is available for non-members at the bar for £10 and can be booked in advance by phone on 01803 8
