The Valentine's Event Posted on 2015-02-19 08:11:23 Valentine's Day is approaching, and the tabletop RPG community is celebrating with a slew of new campaigns and organizations. We've got a few of our favorite campaigns you may be interested in checking out, including a brand new version of Code Geass: Lelouch of the Rebellion! Plus, we've been getting a lot of inquiries about the G-Project, which is a steampunk anime game produced by Sword Coast Studios! All these items are coming from the DANA community, and the brand new character system in Ys VIII: Lacrimosa of Dana is just the first of many upcoming updates. Let's get started by checking out two of our favorite Ys games! Ys VIII: Lacrimosa of Dana is a strategy RPG developed by tri-Ace which released in July 25, 2013, for the PlayStation Vita. There is a reason why this game has been so popular, if you know where to look. The game is basically the same as it has been before but, with a name change, being available on a different platform, with six major enhancements (which we will reveal later). If you love, and I mean love, jRPGs, then you will have a blast playing this game. There is so much to love with Ys VIII: Lacrimosa of Dana. There are plenty of battles, up to 100 kinds of opponents, that you would have to play through every time you went online, but the game won't be a grind and you won't get bored at all. In the game, you play as Dana, the captain of a ship, tasked with exploring the remnants of the world of Ys. There will be a story to the journey along with the
