Thunderbolt Bridge The Thunderbolt Bridge, also known as the U.S. Army Ohio River Bridge, is a toll road bridge on the Ohio River connecting East Liverpool, Ohio and Brookville, West Virginia. It carries a portion of U.S. Route 23. History It was built in 1970 by the Ohio Department of Transportation. Originally named the Union Bridge, it was completed on November 1, 1970. The name was changed to the Thunderbolt Bridge in 1974, when the new US 23 was designated. Tolls The bridge costs $2 to cross if accompanied by an Ohio driver and $1 if a West Virginia driver crosses. In September 2008, the bridge's operator issued a news release informing drivers that the bridge would charge driver tolls of up to $2 to cross the bridge if the tollway was congested. This congested bridge policy was discontinued after a public outcry and financial crisis in April 2009 and the bridge has instead established a free flow through period on the upriver side, with only a toll to enter and exit work zones.
